electric lights, while rows of colored electric lights adorn the face of the building; over the main entrance is the British coat-of-arms. Adorning the Post Office are large transparencies of the King in 1860, the Duke of Cornwall, and in the centre the Duchess with the young Prince Edward. The Court House will be adorned with a glass transparency "welcome," with the royal cypher above. It will also have the Canadian emblem, the beaver, wreathed with maple leaves, and shields of the Duke and Duchess May's heraldic design. The C. P. R. general offices will be brilliantly illuminated, and the buildings of Messrs. Manchester, Robertson & Allison, T. McAvity & Sons, and other firms, as well as the banks, present a magnificent appearance.

Three arches have been constructed—one on Mill street, one on the corner of King and Germain streets, and one on the corner of Main street and Douglas Avenue. The Empire Arch on King street is a double arch, rising from four towers at the corners of the street. It is surmounted by a large globe, showing in red the British possessions, and the arch is adorned with appropriate mottoes.
